WHAT IS THE SPECIAL CARE COUNSELLING PROGRAM?

Champlain – Lennoxville's Special Care Counselling Program is an outstanding three-year technical program. The program trains future special care counsellors in a wide range of subjects including human development, disabilities, crisis intervention, clinical tools and communication skills. Three fieldwork placements including a full semester internship ensure students have an opportunity to apply theory to real-life contexts.

Instructors in the Special Care Counselling program are dedicated and experienced in their field of expertise, offering students the range of knowledge required to work successfully as Special Care Counsellors.

As professional helpers trained to work with people of all ages and with diverse special needs, Special Care Counsellors strive to develop relationships so as to provide clients with support and guidance, facilitate their development and adaptation, monitor progress and help them reach their full potential.

DO YOU...

Often find yourself in the role of the listener?

Enjoy the challenges of helping others in difficult situations?

Feel the ability to guide, support, and empower others comes naturally to you?

Know that this kind of talent can be developed and refined into a professional career?

Then the Special Care Counselling Program may be for you!

OPPORTUNITIES FOR GRADUATES

The Special Care Counselling Program is designed to insure that students receive a multifaceted, practical and professional training that effectively prepares them for many job opportunities. They work in schools, rehabilitation centres, long-term care facilities, community centres, youth centres, group homes, half-way houses, entrepreneurial undertakings and many more. The versatile nature of the profession contributes to a high job placement rate and graduating students are frequently actively recruited in the last semester of study.

Although the Special Care Counselling program fully prepares graduates to begin their working career, they may also continue with university studies at both the undergraduate and graduate level in a number of related fields including Psychology, Social Work, Addiction Studies, Guidance Counselling and Education.
